

Answer from POP: No. "Workation" means: primary residence in Germany, working from abroad for up to 90 days.

If the primary residence is not in Germany, the situation is different. This is because fundamental aspects of employment law as well as social security and tax law then change. If you want to find out more, the "territoriality principle" is the legal governing principle for cross-border issues.

Question: Where is the list of Workation countries?
